General Instructions

How can I determine if I am eligible for the retirement disability income exemption?

You are eligible to take this exemption if you:

- are a Montana resident;
- are under the age of 65;
- are permanently and totally disabled; and
- have not chosen to treat this retirement disability income as a pension or annuity.

“Permanently and Totally Disabled” means that you are unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determined physical or mental impairment lasting or expected to last at least 12 months.

What income qualifies for the retirement disability income exemption?

The only income that you can use to determine your exemption is income reportable on federal form 1099R with a distribution code 3.

How do I determine my adjusted gross income?

The adjusted gross income that you report on line 9 above is your own Montana adjusted gross income. If you are married and filing separately with your spouse, you will have to combine both your spouse's and your Montana adjusted gross income to determine the amount of your retirement disability income exemption.

What information do I need to provide to show proof of my disability?

The department may ask for proof issued by a governmental unit (such as the Social Security Administration) that certifies that you are permanently and totally disabled. If this is not available we may require other verification that can prove your disability.

When claiming this deduction complete Form DS-1 and attach it to your individual income tax return.
